Plastic (polyethylene) “microbeads” can be in toothpastes, facial scrub, deodorants, makeup etc.

When microbeads go down the drain, they do not get removed in the wastewater treatment system. They can end up in the ocean. Toxins in the ocean can stick to the surface of the plastics. Plankton, fish and shellfish can eat them.

Learn more at www.plasticaware.org